Coping Tips!

The National Alliance on Mental Illness (NAMI) offers coping tips for siblings and adult children of persons with mental illness:

- 1). Mental disorders affect everyone who is directly involved. Despite your desire, you cannot cure a mental disorder for someone you love.
- 2). Acknowledge the courage & strength of your family member with the mental disorder.
- 3). Grief issues are often common and powerful. After denial, sadness, and anger over learning about your loved one's mental disorder comes acceptance. Acceptance and understanding of the disorder itself yields compassion for the person you love.

4). Don't be afraid to ask your sibling or parent if he or she is thinking about hurting him- or herself. The possibility of suicide is a real concern, and asking about it will not give them the idea. See if they have safety plan to address these concerns

5). Be sure to prioritize your own self care. Exercise, good rest and nutrition, loving relationships, spiritual or religious support, support groups and hobbies are common avenues to support self care.

6). It is natural for you to experience a variety of emotions such as grief, guilt, fear, anger, sadness, hurt, confusion and more. You, not the person with the disorder, are responsible for your own feelings. Getting psychotherapy support can often be quite helpful for these experiences.
